FASSETT TOO FAST,

And the Falsehood Has Been Fastened On Him.

THE COUNTY DEMOCRACY IS LOYAL,

And Will Stand by the Ticket in Good Faith.

THE CHARGES AGAINST TAMMANY

Are Shown to Be Baseless—The Responsibility of Tweed Belongs to the Republicans.

New York, October 29.—[Special.]—There is no doubt the republicans were counting very largely on a split with the county democracy.

They have induced this organization to put candidates in assembly districts, where the democrats had small majorities, with the object in view to try and capture the legislature. They may succeed in this, but it is very doubtful.

There is no doubt about the election of the state democratic ticket now. It is just a question of majority.

The county democracy passed the following resolution last night:

Resolved, That we declare such statement to be wholly unfounded and unauthorized; that this organization, while remaining unalterably opposed to Tammany rule and methods, has, by its county convention, unanimously endorsed the democratic state ticket, and we propose to loyally abide by the action of the county convention in the support, as well as of the state ticket, which it so endorsed, as of the county ticket which it now endorses.

County Democrats Talk.
The Evening World prints the following interviews with leading county democrats:
Ex-Assistant District Attorney John W. Goff said: "I firmly believe that duty and party obligation will be honorably kept, and that the state ticket will be loyally supported by the county democracy."

Mr. Goff is a leading county democrat, whose aptly the republican managers had confidently counted upon.

Ex-Mayor William R. Grace, who has a very great influence with members of the county democracy organization, says:

"In my opinion, the election of the democratic ticket is assured by a handsome majority. I know it to be a positive fact that the county democrats will be loyal to the ticket, and will work for it. In the districts where the county democrats are strong, they are, to my personal knowledge, working loyally for the ticket, and the republicans need build no hope on getting any of their votes. The importance to the democrats of carrying this election, as a preliminary to the presidential election of next year is so manifest that it is appreciated on all sides."

Ex-Commissioner of Public Works D. Lower Smith, leader of the county democracy in the nineteenth assembly district, said:

"The statement that the county democracy is working in behalf of the republican state ticket is simply a republican campaign lie. Similar falsehoods are told in every election campaign, and they should have no weight. The county democracy has endorsed the democratic state ticket, and it will faithfully support it."

Ex-Police Justice Maurice J. Power, who is acknowledged to be the most influential leader of the organization, declared emphatically:

"All the talk about our selling out Mr. Flower is a campaign lie. The county democrats will not prove treacherous to Mr. Flower on election day."

It was Fasset's Work.

There is no doubt that Fasset sent out the circular letter printed yesterday. It was done mainly to inspire the republicans with hope in the race. He failed.

Mr. Fasset's freshness is not that of youth, for he is old enough to know better; but that of a politician who long experience has not taught that his own party has not the monopoly of honesty and that even Tammany democrats may be as sincere and patriotic as himself. It is hard for sensible men acquainted with political history to have patience with his denunciations of Tammany democracy. To him Tammany appears with hoof and horns, or as a tiger, fierce, rapacious and insatiable. I do not wonder that such a vision haunts leading republicans. There was such a Tammany "tiger" once, and a republican legislature created it. The beast was a most vicious one, sired by Tweed on a very willing republican legislature that had long begrudged the people of democratic New York the power to manage their own affairs. Mr. Tweed was nominally a democrat, but he went up to Albany with what he called a "reform charter." He did not dare trust the people, and so provided a board to do all the business of the city. The board consisted of himself, Sweeney, Richards, Connolly and Oakley Hall, the latter being put on the lookout that republicans had some share of the plunder. What followed is a matter of history. Mr. Tweed made himself boss of Tammany and in two years he and his associates had plundered it of millions of dollars.

Tammany Crowned Out Tweedism.

If Mr. Fasset were not so fresh in political history he would know that this, the real Tammany tiger, was throttled and destroyed by those veteran Tammany democrats, Samuel J. Tilden and Charles O'Connor. Mr. Fasset was a boy when this happened; but he ought to have learned about it since. In 1874, when Mr. Tilden was elected governor by over fifty-four thousand majority, Mr. Fasset lacked a few days of being old enough to vote. But as a boy republican he probably made himself famous shouting the superiority of his party to wicked Tammany democrats like Tilden. But it is more serious when this boy republicanism is changed after years of political life. For Mr. Fasset today to appeal to popular prejudice against Tammany for what it was in Tweed's time ought to blister his lips. I do not wonder his throat is sore. He does not need an aluminum throat.

IN TREMONT TEMPLE

Rev. Sam W. Small and Preacher Montgomery

TALK ABOUT THE THIRD PARTY.

Montgomery Thinks the Republicans All Saints,

While Sam Parades the Dudley Bosses

A Lively Joint Debate Between the Two Speakers in the Boston Temple.

The Women Present.

Boston, Mass., October 29.—[Special.]—Every seat on the floor of Tremont temple was occupied and the balconies were well filled with people to hear the great joint debate between Rev. Hugh Montgomery and Rev. Sam Small on prohibition.

The prohibitionists were considerably in the minority, but they were enough hard-headed republicans present to prevent all the applause from being given to one side.

The platform was occupied by a constituency consisting chiefly of women.

T. B. Briggs, of Cambridge, offered prayer. Each speaker was allowed a half hour in his opening and fifteen minutes for his closing address.

The First Speech.

Mr. Montgomery maintained the affirmative of the question, "that prohibition of the liquor traffic can better be brought about through one of the old political parties than by means of a third party."

When he stepped forward to commence his address he said he was obliged to look behind him to see whether any of the applause came from the rumsellers whom he saw seated on the platform. He said he sat upon a stool which had three legs. The first was a temperance leg, the second a religious and the third a moral leg. He was a prohibitionist, a Methodist and a republican.

"I want to say," said Mr. Montgomery, "that I believe we will be held responsible for the wisdom of our methods as well as for our purposes." We ought to vote for the best men who we know are the best and who we know stand right on this question. Who are the facts on this question? In Ohio in 1883, 300,000 people voted for a prohibitory amendment and only 11,000 for a third party candidate. In Iowa 155,000 votes were cast for constitutional prohibition, while the third party could only muster 5,000 votes.

"The same proportion holds in other states. There is only one out of twenty-eight voters who believes in prohibition who also believes in the third party. I know we have corrupt men in the republican party, but they do not represent the great constituency of the party any more than Judas represented the twelve apostles. It is not right to select a few dirty republicans and hold them up to the commonwealth as specimens of the party. The best way to accomplish temperance reform in this country is to organize the temperance men in both parties and control them and cause them to vote for prohibitory enactments in spite of all the votes of all bad men in either party."

Sam Takes His Chance.

Rev. Sam Small, after announcing that he hoped his opponent would be scripturally correct in his denunciations of the republican party, plunged into a wholesale abuse of the republican party of the present, which he stigmatized as the party of Quays and Dudleys. He gave a magnificent pyrotechnic display of prohibition and democratic statements. He jeered at Speaker Reed and McKinley and Ingalls, and at the republican administration of the state and nation.

He cited the nominees for the legislature in Suffolk county as Judases and traitors, according to Dudley himself, and as allies of the rum power.

After the taking of a collection the closing speeches were made. Mr. Montgomery made an impassioned plea to the people to consider the question from a practical standpoint. He did not deem it a question to cause a laugh, which seemed to be the chief motive of the speaker on the other side, but he presumed that the Georgia orator desired to earn his salary, $2,000, which was paid him for entering the campaign here in Massachusetts. Mr. Montgomery called attention to the fact that the abolitionists worked inside the old parties, and were never for a third party. He riddled the rash statements of the Rev. Small, who had not attempted to answer his arguments, and, in doing so, had to contend with interruptions from the audience, and from a woman on the platform who imagined she was propounding some awful powers.

Small's Last Words.

Mr. Small's closing speech abounded in sarcasm and repartee. Mr. Small wanted to know what was the matter with J. Ellen Foster, and the audience howled. In alluding to the salary he was paid, the Rev. Sam shrieked: "Well, I am going to try and earn what I am paid, anyway. I can't get on wind and water, and the republican party can't get on without me. How much did J. Ellen get for her services, I wonder? No reform within for Sam! Enough to send her to Europe and give her husband a fat position under the government? What did Anna Dickinson get? She got left, and then when she tried to obtain what she was put in an insane asylum."

Mr. friend wanted to work for reform within old party lines. What has become of Albert Griffin and the anti-saloon republican movement? You can't find it now with a search warrant."

The Rev. Sam rattled away at this rate until his time had expired, and the chairman had to call him down.

Two Hundred Cotton Bales Burned.

Montgomery, Ala., October 29.—[Special.]—About two hundred bales of cotton, damaged and purchased as such, from the underwriters at the recent compress warehouse fire, mostly in a loose condition, for the purpose of picking, were burned today at the suburbs of the city near the Montgomery brewery. The first fire took place last night, burning about twenty bales already rejected, while from the sparks of a forest fire the loose cotton caught, and about one hundred and fifty or more bales were consumed, but being damaged cotton, the loss is comparatively less.

The Choctaws Ask For Money.

PARIS, Tex., October 29.—The Choctaw council adjourned today until November 20th. This was done at the suggestion of Chief Jones in order that the delegates may go to Washington and see what can be done in regard to getting money for the leased district which was sold at the last session of the council. A good deal depends in a political way, on the present administration getting the money. If it fails, it will be used by the Sullawards or the national party as material in the next campaign. It is not believed the delegates will get the money.

IT IS IN OHIO

Where the Wanderer May Discover Lively Politics.

FIRE-ALARM FORAKER HEARD FROM

He Has Been Ripping John Sherman Up the Back.

THE SENATORSHIP THE BONE OF STRIFE.

About Which All the Little Republican Fie Dogs of Ohio Are Barking.

COLUMBUS, O., October 29.—[Special.]—The senatorial ghost won't down, despite the strenuous efforts of the republican managers.

It is no secret that Ohio is full of aspiring politicians, and it is equally no secret that a few of these aspirants to the senatorial seat so assiduously warned by the Hon. John Sherman for so many years.

Trying to Keep Hum.

The republicans are, however, trying to keep this fact as quiet as possible. The first step in the present campaign was a calling together of the special workers for the republican cause, and they had a meeting under no circumstances should there be any effort to pledge members of the legislature for any candidate in advance of the election. For a time it looked as if the pledge was to be kept, but of late, and particularly within the past four or five days, somebody has begun to realize that somebody else has been doing exceedingly odd work. The somebody else of this story is that shrewd product of Ohio soil—"Fire-Alarm" Foraker. The friends of Senator Sherman and Secretary Charles Foster, like the foolish virgins of holy writ, have been blind to the necessity of gathering in the oily-tongued and shrewd politician who is just beginning to realize that they have been nearly tripped.

They Talked Too Soon.

Now that they feel sure, Foraker's friends are making loud claims of having already secured enough pledges to carry the ticket. It is the opinion of the best politicians that they have made their boast too soon, and that both the republican state and legislative tickets will suffer. In Hamilton county, particularly, the better element of republicans have been giving the ticket only lukewarm support, owing to their disgust of the Foraker machine.

Now the developments concerning the Foraker grasp on the senatorship are likely to drive away from the ticket still another element, and that the one upon which McKinley has relied for his election. I mean the Germans. The Germans, who are postmaster, German, of Cincinnati, expressed to me today, they claim Sherman as one of them because of his name. Then the Germans have always stuck to John on his financial policy, and they will not be misled by the Foraker machine. They regard Foraker as a bright young man, but they want nobody but Sherman for the senate. The result is that all the republican enthusiasm has been knocked out of them.

The Germans Aroused.

Another important fact has been developed in the last day or two, which is likely to help Campbell by further disgusting the Germans with McKinley, and perhaps drawing their support to the democratic ticket. McKinley has a record as a prohibitionist. The Germans of Ohio, no more than the Germans of Georgia, love prohibitionists. It is their vote which swings the state one way or the other, and up to this stage of the campaign they have undoubtedly been for McKinley, but records just brought to light show that McKinley was, several years ago, president of a prohibition club at Canton, and the strongest kind of anti-temperance resolutions, written by him, have been unearthed.

As you can readily believe, the democrats are using these facts for all they are worth, particularly in the case of the Germans, and it is by no means impossible that this prohibition business, coupled with the senatorial fight, may yet swing the state into the democratic column.

Another word about the senatorship—there was an important conference here today between Charles Foster, on the one side, and McKinley, on the other, and Charles Thompson, and Tom Goulet on the other.

The last three gentlemen are Sherman's special friends and managers, and have been for years.

They Seek Union.

It has leaked out that the conference was for the purpose of bringing about some unity of action between the Sherman and Foster forces. Foster has not been an avowed candidate, but he has been conducting a still hunt. His appointment to Harrison's cabinet was made with the express stipulation that he was to secure Ohio's delegation in the next national convention for Harrison, but Charles hasn't forgotten how to look out for his own interests. Six years ago Foster was elected to the senate, and then he would suit him immensely, and then he would be in a position to abandon the Harrison boomlet to the mercy of the Blaine boom, which Mr. Foster has already blown to gigantic proportions. Yes, Foster would like to be senator, but just now it's anything to beat Foraker, and a vote has gone out to trade McKinley for a vote for any legislative candidate who is against Foraker. When election time comes, let them begin fighting among themselves. Kilkenny cats "ain't in it." They have one another much more than they hate the democrats, and the Sherman and Foster men would rather see a democrat sent to the legislature than a Foraker republican.

Numbers of counties and several senatorial districts which Foraker has counted as certain, are very close, and, as Charles Grosvenor said tonight, you may look for something to drop in those localities.

The People's Party.

One element in this campaign, which both parties have nearly ignored, but which may surprise them mightily, is the people's party. I have talked today with the two men who are best able to estimate the strength of that party, and from both I received information which leads me to believe that it will cut more of a figure than the politicians expect. These men were Alva Allen, president of the state alliance, and Hugh Cavanaugh, the great Knight of Labor, whose name is known in labor circles from one end of this country to the other.

Mr. Cavanaugh is one of the leaders of the people's party, was chairman of their convention at Springfield, and is consulted on all features of the campaign.

"I think," he said in reply to my question,

Causes a Little Commotion in Washington City.

WHAT WILL BE THE NEXT MOVE?

Probably a Formal Demand for Reparation,

AND IN EVENT OF A REFUSAL

Minister Egan Will Be Recalled and All Diplomatic Relations with Chile Cut Off—Gossip about the Matter.

WASHINGTON, October 29.—There was some excitement in official circles here this morning over the Santiago press cablegram announcing the receipt of the unsatisfactory response from the junta to representatives of the United States, and saying that the Baltimore crew were practically "boycotted" at Valparaiso. Naval officials discredit the latter statement and believe its foundation lies in the prudent course adopted by Commodore Schley, respecting the granting of liberty to his sailors during the present condition of excitement. No word has been received at the navy department from the commodore respecting any new phase in the situation.

At the department of state a cipher telegram from Minister Egan was received this morning, but it has not yet been translated. The officials are yet in ignorance of its contents.

Contents of the Cablegram.

The cablegram was translated and laid before the president about noon. Secretaries Blaine and Tracy were immediately summoned, and there was a long conference. At 6 o'clock the following official statement of the contents of Minister Egan's dispatch was made public:

The department of state received this morning a telegram from Minister Egan, dated Santiago, October 28th, in which he gives the following as the reply of the Chilean government to the president's cablegram, October 25th, asking reparation for the recent murder of American sailors in the streets of Valparaiso:

The minister of foreign affairs says that the government of the United States formulates demands and advances threats that, without being met, will result in the Chilean law, in which the government of the United States is not bound to accept the present case, or in any other of like nature. He does not doubt the ability, rectitude and experience of the Chilean government to deal with the case, but he regrets only the jurisdiction and authority of the Chilean government to judge and punish the guilty in Chilean territory. He says the administration and judicial authorities have been investigating the affair. A secret investigation, under the Chilean law, is in progress, and the time is not yet arrived to disclose the result. When the time arrives he will communicate the result, although he does not recognize any other authority competent to judge criminal cases than the Chilean government. He says the investigation, he cannot admit that the disorders in Valparaiso, or the silence of the Chilean press, might put in peril the friendly relations between the two countries.

A Demand Will Be Made.

No reply has been made to this dispatch yet.

What will be the next move? The answer is that suggestions courteously and diplomatically conveyed in Acting Secretary Wharton's dispatch, that this government had no doubt investigation would be made and reparation afforded, will now be renewed in the shape of a stern and formal demand for some immediate assurance of proper action on the part of the junta, and that if these be not forthcoming Minister Egan will take passage on the Baltimore for the United States, thus severing the diplomatic relations between the two countries.

What the British Papers Say.

LONDON, October 29.—The Telegraph, referring to the Chilean imbroglio, says: President Harrison was perfectly justified in acting as he did. Doubtless Minister Egan's appointment has turned out to be a mistake. It could have been made. His action was a notorious violation of the obligations of neutrality, but there is no reason in the world why a Chilean should adopt a defiant attitude. If they refused to accept an investigation and punish the guilty parties, they were acting under the impulse of insensate pride. It will be necessary for the United States to demand reparation for the loss of the lives of the sailors, and to insist that the Chilean government should take steps to prevent a recurrence of such a case.

The Post, after remarking that the naval inferiority of the United States will make it difficult for her to coerce Chile, expresses the hope that both parties will modify their attitude before proceeding to hostilities. The Post then enters into an elaborate argument, quoting from authorities on international law, and showing practical instances to prove the validity of Minister Egan's views on the exterritoriality of the United States legislation, and concludes:

The whole question is so important that the action of the United States will be watched with interest everywhere, and not without anxiety at the prospect of a confusing revolution of international customs."

She was on the gallery with the baby, and her attention being drawn away a moment, she turned to see the baby disappear over the edge of the platform. The distance to the ground was twenty feet, but she immediately sprang after the baby, and both fell to the ground at almost the same moment. The baby escaped with a few bruises, while the mother had her hip dislocated. She is not seriously hurt.

A BOLD GAME.

Horton and His Colleagues Planning a Desperate Scheme to Escape.

THEIR LITTLE GAME UNEARTHED.

The Express Robbers and Bridge Burners In for the Author of the Anonymous Letters Spotted.

The Southern Express Company is after Horton, the express robber and bridge burner, and his colleagues.

If there is any merit in vigilance and prosecution, the express company is going to ferret out every detail of the recent crimes and bring to account and punishment their aiders and abettors, and those who are taking such a lively interest in them.

Since the arrest and incarceration of the Hortons, Thornton and Braswell, the Central Railroad Company and the Southern Express have been receiving a series of anonymous communications containing all manner of threats against the property and officials of the two companies, if the three men were not released. Some of these communications have been published, and have been read with no small interest by the public. They were written in the language and tone of the unprincipled, unscrupulous and desperate outlaws, and were by no means modest in the character of the threats.

The express company took it under careful consideration, and concluded to sift the whole matter thoroughly, and procure all the evidence possible to catch and correct the authors of the anonymous letters.

Wednesday Superintendent Mays, of the Southern Express Company; Superintendent McKee, of the Central Railroad Company; Chief of Detectives Couch, and Detective Owens, visited the cells of the alleged robbers in the Fulton county jail for the purpose of searching for evidence that would lead to the detection and capture of the authors of the anonymous letters.

The chief object of the visit to Horton's cell was to compare the writing of the letters he has from his brother with that of the anonymous letters received by the company. Horton rose and greeted the four gentlemen with sullen indifference. When asked to show the letters which he had received from his brother he complied with the request. The letters were handed over, and read, but the author had cleverly guarded his points and not a word in them could be used as a clue to further investigation. But when the handwriting was compared, the four gentlemen simultaneously pronounced it identical with that of the threatening epistles in the possession of the express and railroad companies.

The gentlemen after a close examination decided that there could be no doubt that the letters were all written by the same party. This was valuable information, but was not all that was revealed.

In continuing the search some suspicious little bundles were discovered cleverly concealed in one corner of the cell. Just how they came to be there is a mystery to the jail keepers.

One of the most significant of these articles was a steel spring, made from the finest of metal, and its form was such that it could be converted into a saw with little trouble. With this instrument it would be easy to cut the bars of the cell and jail doors, and with the sick work of men Horton's character escape would be almost sure. Three pistol cartridges were also found concealed in the cell, but just what Horton intended doing with these is not to tell. The steel bar and the cartridges were undoubtedly slipped into Horton's cell by some friend, who, under cover of the darkness, had slipped them in the jail, gained admittance. It may be that the same party would eventually have slipped a revolver to Horton.

These discoveries were kept very quiet by the railroad and express officials and the detectives. The letters found in Horton's cell and those received by the express and railroad companies were given an expert, who yesterday pronounced the handwriting to be that of the same man.

All day yesterday the express and railroad companies kept good work at work on the matter, and it is stated that other damaging evidence against the robbers was procured.

PETITION FOR RECEIVER

For the Atlanta Furniture Manufacturing Company.

Wheeler, Probasco &amp; Co. filed today a petition for injunction against the Atlanta Furniture Manufacturing Company. They ask that a receiver be appointed, that the holders of several mortgages against the company be enjoined from foreclosing these mortgages, and that, until the hearing of the case, a temporary receiver be appointed. It is alleged that the holders of the mortgages mentioned are stockholders in the company. The indebtedness to Wheeler, Probasco &amp; Co. is $41,101.82.

Judge J. H. Guerry issued an order enjoining the defendants from selling or disposing of the mortgage property mortgaged, and also from foreclosing the mortgage, and setting the case for a hearing before Judge Richard H. Clark on the 7th of November.

A Thing of Beauty.

The New York Dramatic News is about to issue their Christmas number, which is now practically complete. The list of contributors comprises such well-known literatures as ex-Senator John Ingalls, Eugene Field, George Alfred Towns, Wendell Willkie, Nym Crinkle, Bill Nye and many others equally as famous. The News is not only the most voluminous paper of its kind, but is the most authoritative. Its Christmas number will no doubt eclipse all publications of like nature ever gotten out for the theater-loving people in this country.

Chief Attraction.

The exhibit of the Georgia Phonograph Company at the exposition still continues to be the chief attraction. No one should visit the exposition without dropping a "nickel-in-the-slot" and hearing the beautiful reproduction of the finest music, specially gathered from all parts of the United States for these wonderful instruments.

MR. J. C. BOWEN DEAD.

An Old Local Resident Passes Away Yesterday Morning.

Mr. J. C. Bowen, one of the oldest and best known residents of Atlanta, died yesterday morning at his home, 180 South Forsyth street. For nearly two months he had been sick and his death was not unexpected. He leaves a widow, a most estimable woman, and five children—three sons and two daughters.

Bowen came to Atlanta more than thirty years ago. He engaged here in the business of a contractor, and, until his late illness, had been a prominent builder and lumber dealer, being connected with the firm of Crankshaw &amp; Co. He was a gallant soldier, and at his death was a member of the Confederate Veterans.

Few residents of Atlanta were more highly esteemed than he for his splendid traits of character and gentlemanly qualities. He was a consistent Christian and in his death his family has the sincerest sympathy of many friends.

The funeral will take place this afternoon from his late residence on Forsyth street.

MRS. H. P. JONES DEAD.

The Body of a Well-Known Lady Arrives in Atlanta.

The body of Mrs. H. Phillips Jones, a member of one of the oldest and most prominent families of Burke county, arrived in Atlanta yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. It was accompanied by the grief-stricken, devoted husband.

Mrs. Jones went to Rome for medical treatment several weeks ago, but her illness was of such a nature as to battle all medical skill and the attention of loving hands. Wednesday evening she passed away.

Mrs. Jones was born one year ago. She leaves a husband and a very wide circle of friends to mourn her loss. Her family is connected with some of Georgia's most excellent residents, and the lady was always esteemed by the many who knew her. She was possessed of many excellent traits of character, and was a charming young woman. To her friends her death will be a severe blow.

The funeral will take place this morning from the residence of Mrs. W. H. Weems, 35 Crow street.

"The County Fair."

Monday and Tuesday nights, November 2d and 3d, and Tuesday matinee, "The County Fair" will be given an elaborate production. The play amply serves its purpose, which is to furnish the framework for a picture of simple New England country life. Its heroine is Abigail True, the strong-minded, unsophisticated, though shrewd and warm-hearted spinster, and is a clearly drawn picture of a certain phase of human nature. Realism and rusticity are the keynote to the triumph of the comedy. It has just enough drama to interest the mind from dwelling on the story of the heroine, and presents several realistic items. The treatment of the play is epitomized in The New York Herald in the following words: "The County Fair is a fragrance of fresh hay and flowers and the laughter of village made in midsummer." Of the great dramatic and mechanical climax of the comedy, the running horse race—little remains to be told. It is, beyond doubt, the greatest effect of modern times.

Which would you rather possess: Riches, Wisdom, or Luck?

You would probably say "Luck," for then you can invite the other two to keep you company.

Too bad, however, that there is no such a thing as luck. Everything in this world goes by cause and effect. HEALTH is what we should all not only choose, but seek.

The steady march of universal progress every now and then reveals something which becomes a lasting benefit to mankind. Take Johann Hoff's Malt Extract. As the standard nutritive tonic of the world, it stands supreme. Emperors, kings, statesmen, financiers—all mankind generally has used it for more than forty years. The medical fraternity recommends all troubled with indigestion or dyspepsia, malnutrition, general debility, or lung diseases, should use it. ## Wake Up.

If you wake up in the morning with a bitter or bad taste in your mouth, Languor, Dull Headache, Dependancy, Constipation, take Simmons Liver Regulator. It corrects the bilious stomach, sweetens the breath and cleanses the furred tongue. Children as well as adults sometimes eat something that does not digest well, producing Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Restlessness, or Sleeplessness—a good dose of Regulator will give relief. So perfectly harmless is this remedy that it can be taken by the youngest infant or the most delicate person without injury, no matter what the condition of the system may be. It can do no harm if it does no good, but its reputation for 40 years proves it never fails in doing good.
